POLITICAL TRAGEDIES.

The game of politics is in most of its aspects a game of chance, a gamble. Most of those who sit in the game realize this, knowing that there is more chance of losing than there is of winning. And as the politician is necessarily something of a philosopher, who takes his winnings without whimpering, little in general is heard of the tragedies of the game, though these tragedies are probably as numerous as those attendant upon other big games of chance.

The primary elections brought two such tragedies to notice, one in Jasper County and the other in Lawrence. The Jasper County tragedy relates to Judge Joseph D. Perkins who has been a distinguished judge of the circuit court for over 20 years. This time he was defeated for the nomination. A younger man, S.W. Bates of Webb City, defeated the veteran jurist of Carthage.

In Lawrence County Scott B. Dayton has been judge of the probate court for 16 years. This time he was defeated for the nomination by a younger man, Eldred Seneker. Judge Perkins is a Democrat; Judge Dayton is a Republican, so the tragedies of politics are not confined to any party. They occur in all parties.

And there is no reproach implied to the successful candidates. They pursued a laudable ambition and placed themselves at the disposal of the voters. If there is any reproach to anyone it is to the voters who retire veterans like Judge Perkins after years of honorable service. But here again it is doubtful whether a reproach is justified, for the voters are subjected to many influences and they have their peculiarities and their prejudices.—Sarcoux Record.

HE LIKES THE FLAPPERS.

Honest now, you old timers— isn't bobbed hair a lot nicer than than combing it straight and twisting it into one knot on the back of the head? Don't deny it, you remember when even young women wore it that way. Also how does bobbed hair compare with the three story rats the women used to wear on the top of the head much the same as an army blanket around a soldier's shoulders?—McCune (Kans.) Herald.

Seek New Supplies of Ivory.

Genuine Ivory is exceedingly scarce, and many hunters left Seattle last summer to prospect the Yukon and Norton sound tundras for mastodon tusks, says the Scientific American. Another source of supply is the Behring sea walrus and narwal.

S. W. MO. STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE, SPRINGFIELD MO.

The Southwest Missouri State Teachers College is the name given by legislative enactment to the institution known until the summer of 1919 as the Fourth District Normal School, established in 1906 at Springfield. From the beginning the school has maintained professional and academic courses of the rank and character offered by the best teacher's colleges. The recognition of this fact brought about the change to the truer name the Southwest Missouri State Teachers College.

The ideal preparation for any teacher cannot be less than a strong four years' high school course, and in addition a full properly directed four year collegiate course. The Teachers College recognizes this preparation for teaching by conferring the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education.

Young men and women who wish a full collegiate course undetermined by specific professional aim may do their work in the Teachers College. Those who complete 120 hours of academic courses and select major and minors according to the advice and approval of the committee on graduation are entitled to the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

The resources provided by the State of Missouri are at the service of those who may desire to do the first two years of a legal or a medical course at the Teachers College. All the courses needed for this purpose are provided.

The state maintains a department for the training of teachers for commercial work. The superior courses in book-keeping, stenography, etc., which are maintained for the purpose, are open to students desiring commercial training at no increased cost.

The faculty of the Conservatory of Music consists of nine full time instructors. All phases of musical instruction are offered, at a maximum cost of one dollar per lesson.

Total fees in all departments $12.50 per term. No additional library, laboratory or athletic fees. Write for catalog. adv. Clyde M. Hill, Pres.

FATED.

A dusky youth from Memphis was witness for a railroad company in a suit over the killing of another negro by a train, the stand of the company being an attempt to prove that the dead man was in bad health anyway so that the amount of damages might be lowered. The witness liked the job of testifying and, when asked to describe the state of health of the other, replied:

"Dat boy was de feeblest boy Ah ever did see. Why, he was so feeble dat if he hadn't been run over by dat train he was jes' nacherly boun' to die at leas' two days previous. Yassuh, he sho' was was a sickly boy."—Ex.

"STEELHEART"

SYNOPSIS

A thrilling story of the mining country, filled with real action and intense dramatic moments, is a film called "Steelheart." William Duncan, who has won countless followers because of his fighting spirit and realism, appears at his best in this production. Edith Johnson has a role that calls for great ability and skill. Among the intense dramatic scenes and thrills are a fight in the dark, a combat between Duncan and an enraged bear, a fight on a cliff in which both contestants are carried over the edge and fall into the rapids below and an explosion in the mountain in which hero and heroine are imperiled. An intense love interest is interwoven in the plot, and some of the most picturesque backgrounds have been used to emphasize the action and make each scene pleasing to the eye. It is a picture well worth seeing.
